Operating Systems License File Size Overclocking Operating on MSI Z97 Gaming 7 Windows 10 Home Edition (64-bit). 12288 MB 0.87 GHz When I turn on my laptop, I can see an LED next to the bios logo light up and stay on. If I switch to 'bios'(P5-E) and back to'uefi'(MSI Z97 Gaming 7) the LED on the bios logo has changed to a line and will continually run until I switch the HDD to IDE (Jet eSATA). When I enter the bios (P5-E) I can see that the CPU Fan is running at 100% and the GPU Fan is running at 100%.
The LED next to the bios logo on my laptop is flickering (orange). It is not flickering at any other point in time.
*my laptop takes 4 hours to get to full load* When I unplug my battery the laptop is able to get to full load in a few minutes. If i switch it to IDE the LED next to the bios logo does not flicker. But after a full load it will still run at 100% of the fan speed. It will not turn on when I turn on the fan. When I pull out the SATA cables and try to boot the laptop (I get a black screen) the fans will run about 10% of the speed. Once I've booted it will run at 100% the rest of the time. When I plug my battery in the LED next to bios logo flickers orange and stops working. If I don't plug the battery in then it will stay orange and continue to run. I'll try a swap of the hard drive I'm trying to install bootcamp, but it doesn't seem to matter where I put it. If I boot into windows on my laptop I can see the GPU light up at 70% and the CPU at 60%. I've tried everything to troubleshoot. I've switched the jumper on the motherboard, changed cables, tried both mobo and SSD in different slot numbers. I tried to follow instructions on the HP website and didn't seem to work. The problem: When I run "aticonfig --od-get display" I can see the video drivers are installed. But "coretemp" 82138339de
