German Patent Publication No. 3,141,991 describes an arrangement which enables electrical measuring and programming of automatic radio-controlled vehicles. A transformer is provided on the vehicle and is used for frequency transformation of the control pulses from a frequency generator to the frequency used in the vehicle. The frequency generator is located in the vehicle and is also connected to the transformer on the vehicle. Since the pulses which run via the transformer are significantly lower in frequency than the control pulses, it is necessary to provide a relatively high-voltage capacitor to the transformer to avoid the operating voltage of the transformer being affected, due to the high-frequency signal. An even greater danger for the transformer lies in the fact that the frequencies in the vehicle connected to the transformer via the transformer could possibly increase, whereby these frequencies could possibly cause damage to the transformer. German Patent No. 2,525,619 describes an arrangement in which an infrared transmitter is used to transmit data to an infrared receiver. A frequency converter in the transmitter is used to convert the data signal into a signal at a higher frequency. The transmitted signal at the higher frequency is transmitted to the receiver, and is then converted into the original data signal by an intermediate-frequency converter. The data can thus be sent with the use of an infrared transmitter, but there is only one data channel per transmitter.package com.tweakfollow.widget.views.circularimageview; import android.content.Context; import android.graphics.Color; import android.util.AttributeSet; import android.view.View; import android.widget.ImageView; import com.tweakfollow.widget.views.circularimageview.view.ColorView; / * Created by olivio.granato 3da54e8ca3
