10. Create new art. Choose File > New > Artwork. Be sure to select Adobe RGB color space and a 24-bit (4-8-bits per color) JPG file type. If your printer can't print 8-bit or 16-bit files, select the Photoshop Plug-in file option. If you're using Photoshop Elements, go to Edit > Edit Color. From the Application Presets dialog box, select 8-bit. (See the tip on the next page.) 11. Add a new layer. Use the Shapes tool to draw a circle on the canvas. If you want the circle to stay with the background, right-click the layer and choose Make Layer Background. If you want to adjust the fill and stroke, press Ctrl+J (+J on a Mac). Draw a second circle, this time in front of the first. Draw a third one. It's fun to make some shapes! You can leave the circles in place as long as you want (although you may need to deselect the art layers one by one to edit their settings), or you can delete them.

Fire Capt. Fressendyck resigns Barbara Hendricks resigns as director at NAACP Fressendyck announced his resignation last Thursday after being named in a police investigation of cheating on his South Shore bar exam. Barbara Hendricks, director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People-Chicago, has resigned. By Up Next Barbara Hendricks, director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People-Chicago, has resigned. By One of the City Council's longest-serving African-American men has stepped down amid police allegations of cheating on the South Shore bar exam. On May 11, Mayor Lori Lightfoot announced the resignation of Fire Capt. Larry Fressendyck after he was named in an ongoing police investigation into cheating on the bar exam. The other official to resign is Chicago's first black firefighter, Marshall Garvey, who resigned from the fire department's special operations bureau on May 17. More Sign Up and Save "These are deeply disturbing allegations, and the city must take all possible steps to ensure that this kind of unlawful cheating does not happen again," Lightfoot said in a statement. Garvey, a 22-year veteran of the department, returned to the fire academy in November after being placed on leave in March when the test was administered in April. The Chicago Fire Department said in a statement Thursday that Garvey's resignation is effective immediately. "The Captain was placed on administrative leave on March 17, 2019, pending the results of a test security investigation. At that time, we were in the midst of completing an internal investigation into allegations of exam cheating that occurred at the bar exam center at the University of Illinois at Chicago," the fire department said in a statement. "The Chicago Fire Department has a strict zero tolerance policy against cheating and our top priority is ensuring that the integrity of our exam process is maintained. We have a rigorous, stringent testing program that includes random spot checks to ensure exam security and to avoid cheating. Based on our investigation, the Fire Department informed the city of the allegations made against the Captain, who was then placed on administrative leave.” The fire department said that upon learning of the investigation involving Fressendyck, it “immediately conducted an internal review and determined that the Fire Captain was no longer in violation of any
