On the one hand, I had the square itself in view, the lone chestnut tree, the hills. And on the other, my eyes roved the houses and the sky, letting myself go. As a child, I was always dreaming of having a house of my own." ~Kazan, 1866 "The first thing a person sees on entering Kazan is the beauty of the cathedral. MouseTool is a utility for preventing the system from locking the screen after a specified time interval. It also provides the possibility to avoid other functions like sleep, shutdown and hibernate of the computer. The app can be used in two modes, the first one allows you to set a time delay for the lock screen, while the second one serves as a screen saver. A countdown timer is available in the program's first tab, and you can set it to a desired time interval. From there, you can set a time delay between the system locking and the screensaver starting. You can also choose to avoid the screen locks, shutdowns and hibernates with the option of no lock, power save or hibernate screen. The interface offers the ability to activate and deactivate any of the three functions. Moreover, the programs' settings will be remembered upon every reboot, so you do not have to worry about remembering them. While the package may seem a bit simplistic, the app provides a fast and user-friendly interface, and does not take much memory to operate. In addition, the software is not intrusive, and does not slow down the system. No screensaver is a simple utility with a user-friendly interface, but it does not have all the features a user may require. This app is a good choice for novices, but it does lack some of the features you may expect.
