I've built a handful of iMessage apps over the years, but never reallyÂ .Homeschooling: it really is just an option. If I'd known how incredible it would be to be home, I would have signed my child up for the homeschool program years ago. After a few years of traditional schooling, my husband and I knew that we were going to homeschool our children. I was very impressed with the Distance Learning Home School (DLHS) program and was excited for the experience of being a homeschooling family. Our first experience was fabulous! We could adjust our lesson plans daily to what our children were learning and review those lessons weekly. We were truly learning together as a family. When we decided to send our second child to DLHS, I was terrified that we'd be overwhelmed, but I didn't feel overwhelmed at all. We have continued to grow as homeschooling families and have now discovered a brand new program called Distance Learning Homeschool Design (DLHD). We recently moved from North Carolina to Connecticut and signed up with the DLHD program right after moving. DLHD gives us an amazing opportunity to be involved in our child's education at home. There are many different programs we can choose from and the program we are in gives us lessons every day, as well as exciting field trips, and a bonus online learning program. We have been able to begin homeschooling in the very beginning of the school year. The best part is that I LOVE doing the "homework" part of the program. I feel like I am being professional, when really I am just studying fun literature and doing creative activities with my kids. While I was not in the DLHS program, I was able to visit the homes

(Nid/VWF) is a laminin-1-binding protein that is released from the endothelial cell surface in a form bound to the GPI anchor of VWF (GPI-VWF). Studies of the interactions of GPI-VWF with laminin have been difficult because of the insolubility of laminin-1. We report here that the interaction of GPI-VWF with laminin-1 is mediated by a binding region on the alpha 5 chain of laminin-1, which has recently been identified as the site of binding of alpha 2 beta 1 integrins. Recombinant alpha 5 chain (r alpha 5-chain) was produced in baculovirus-infected Sf9 cells. Limited proteolysis of laminin-1 results in the release of a region of the alpha 5 chain from the intact molecule, with a M(r) of approximately 65K, that contains a region of the molecule homologous to VWF. r alpha 5-chain binds with high affinity ($KD = 1.2 \times 10^{-8}$ M) to laminin-1 and VWF-containing cell surface. A tryptic digestion of VWF of a molar excess of laminin-1/VWF ligand results in the release of VWF from laminin-1. This observation suggests that the alpha 5-chain of laminin-1 and the VWF A2 domain can interact with each other. Nid/VWF can displace alpha 2 beta 1 integrins from their interaction with laminin-1/VWF complexes. This result suggests that the binding of VWF A1 domain to the laminin alpha 5 chain and the subsequent release of VWF from laminin-1 may promote the sequestration of alpha 2 beta 1 648931e174
