It supports the command line interface for macro automation, in AutoCAD Activation Code 2002, AutoCAD 2007, AutoCAD LT, AutoCAD 2009, and AutoCAD LT 2009. AutoCAD can call functions and methods from other programming languages, as well as access AutoLISP functions directly through the command line. These command-line interfaces are available in the Autodesk C++ SDK. AutoCAD Architecture is a third party AutoCAD plugin that uses AutoLISP. Standard Add-ons AutoCAD also supports the product building process through its "Standard Add-ons". These are add-on packages that come with AutoCAD that are compatible with all AutoCAD versions. The company has also created other add-ons that do not have a yearly release cycle and are updated whenever new releases are made available. These add-ons are fully compatible with AutoCAD LT, therefore users that do not have AutoCAD 2009, can use them on the software. The API is available on the application store Autodesk Exchange Apps. In 2017, Autodesk announced the beta version of Autodesk Forge, a cloud-based service for connecting third-party solutions to AutoCAD. Interoperability AutoCAD allows the user to import and export drawing information in the DXF format. Another format for saving drawings is the DWG (Drawing Interchange File) format. AutoCAD supports versioning, which allows you to change files while drawing without losing any previous work. Both of these formats are compatible with other programs that read and write drawing information such as AutoCAD Architecture and AutoCAD LT Architectural. Software features Macro editing AutoCAD's macro editing allows the user to create their own commands to save time and effort. The user can create a macro that can be run as a command from the command line interface. There are several ways to create a macro: The Macro Tool in AutoCAD provides the most powerful macro-editing tools. The macro can be used as a command or a standard user command.
