Marilyn Barnett Marilyn Ruth Davis Barnett (born November 14, 1947) is a Democratic politician from the U.S. state of Florida. She served as the 11th Governor of Florida from 1991 to 1993. Barnett won the Democratic primary, defeating incumbent Bob Martinez, and went on to defeat incumbent Republican Governor Lawton Chiles, the then-incumbent Florida Secretary of State, in the 1992 general election. State Senate career After her election as governor, Barnett was appointed to the Florida Senate in 1994. She was reelected in 1996, 1998 and 2002. Her district, Florida's 9th, includes Orlando, Winter Park, Orange County, and most of central Florida. Governor of Florida 1988 Gubernatorial Campaign Barnett had been a member of the Florida House of Representatives from 1980 to 1988, including two years as speaker. In 1988, Barnett was the Democratic nominee for governor. Bob Martinez, the incumbent governor, came close to defeating Governor Carter in the general election, but Carter won. Afterwards, Barnett took over Carter's old office. 1992 Gubernatorial Campaign In the 1992 gubernatorial election, Barnett won a primary for governor over Bob Martinez and Bill Gunter, and was defeated by incumbent Governor Lawton Chiles in the general election. Post-Governorship After losing her reelection bid, Barnett returned to the Florida Senate in 1996. Barnett later returned to practicing law, serving as Managing Shareholder of Litchfield, Barnett and Tindall. She has been a member of the Florida Governor's Economic Growth Advisory Council since 2005. . Grammarian (Telecommunications) Ltd. is a South African public listed company that specialises in the supply of telecommunications services to medium and large businesses. Operating through a network of subsidiaries and regional offices, Grammarian supplies a number of services which, including complex voice and data network infrastructure, fibre infrastructure, data services as well as unified IT services. History Grammarian was established as an engineering (T&M Engineering Industries) and manufacturing (Grammarian Paper Corporation) business. The company was established in 1983 as a joint venture between SABC (the South African Broadcasting Corporation), and Palladium (a Palladium Group company, now Optexcor Ltd). Grammarian produced the Southern Financial Board's Time Pool and UHF radio transmitters and receivers for many years. Under the leadership of Chief Executive and Managing Director, G.J. Prinsloo, Grammarian acquired the Cape based ARCA Telephone Systems, a manufacturer of highly successful wireless PABX systems in 1994 and a re-branding of ARCA as a division of Grammarian. In the same year, the Prinsloo family acquired Remington Rand, a South African conglomerate with business interests in insurance, banking, manufacturing and the media. The Prinsloo family subsequently re-launched Grammarian as a national telecommunications company supplying a range of telecommunications and other services. Grammarian became the official distributor and manufacturer of VoIP telephony equipment for South Africa, operating under the brand name Siemcor. The brand partnership however came to an end in 2007 after Siemcor was sold to the original German VoIP equipment manufacturer Neovia. In 2001 Grammarian acquired the South African based Pan African Computer Company (PAC), a well known Cape-based IT and data storage company originally under the portfolio management of Fokker. In 2006, Grammarian formed a strategic alliance with ZN Mobile Communications (Pty)

Ltd. The worldwide mobile phone industry was reaching a crossroad at the time, as the CRTC and multiple other countries were introducing liberalising legislation to allow consumer choice on the UK's national fixed line network, although this did not have a direct impact on mobile phone operators themselves. With the introduction of a liberalised mobile phone market in South Africa, the general consensus across the country was that there would be rapid uptake for future generation mobile phones. Consolidation across the sector, and price wars would eventually force non-branded handsets onto the market

This is the first report to show the physiological significance of the presence of plasticizer and chloramine in water systems in R. rubrum by using a metabolome-level data in real experimental circumstance. We demonstrated that the levels of glucose, glycerol, and ethanol are increased in the physiologically stressed culture. These results indicate that homologous genetic information from cell division by using glucose and ethanol as carbon sources in heterotrophic environmental stress response is transferred to proton motive force by glycolysis and oxidative phosphorylation, respectively. The level of pyruvate and acetyl-CoA are increased in the stressed condition. Similar results were reported in previous studies, in which pyruvate and acetyl-CoA levels were increased after mid-log phase and stationary phase cells were exposed to periodic weak (on/off) stresses (Lee, Seo, Park, Cho, & Lee, 2012{ref-type="ref"}). Without cell division, what is catalyzed by glycolysis and oxidative phosphorylation for sustaining Rhodopseudomonas cells? Previous studies reported that the metabolic processes of glucose by stationary phase cells were less efficient than that of cultivation under aerobic conditions (Sass et al., 2002{ref-type="ref"}). We also confirmed the reduced anaerobic growth of
