1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a liquid ejecting apparatus provided with a liquid ejecting head which ejects a liquid onto a paper sheet or the like in an inkjet method or the like. 2. Description of the Related Art In an inkjet print head, at a constant pressure generating chamber, pressure-changes are caused by causing a pressure wave to be transmitted by each pulse signal. From an ink supply port, at the common pressure generating chamber, a part of ink inside the pressure generating chamber changes its state due to this pulse signal and is ejected from a nozzle at the head at a fixed ejecting pressure. Fluctuations in ejection speed result in a dot to be formed on the paper sheet. To the supply port of each pressure generating chamber, a pulse valve is connected. This pulse valve is opened and closed by each of pulse signals. The opening and closing timing of the pulse valve is conducted so that the supply of ink at a fixed speed is possible. This is conceived so as not to make the ejected ink land in a meniscus portion of the nozzle and not to have the ejected ink re-attach to the nozzle. Here, pulse signal intensity represents an ink droplet ejecting pressure and, when a pulse signal
