What's new:

Dreamlands: Cotton Candy Hunt is an outdoor carnival game played at Six Flags AstroWorld. Dreamlands: Cotton Candy Hunt is a steel roller coaster modeled after the Cotton Candy Ride, a children's amusement park ride. The game was meant to be added to the gift shop alongside other Six Flags gift items; however, on May 17, 2011, Six Flags removed it from the gift shop after the ride was removed from the amusement park. Dreamlands: Cotton Candy Hunt is a steel roller coaster built in 1999, and it was the second roller coaster built and relocated to AstroWorld after the Der Steiner-designed Heavy Metal Express (formerly named Thunder Run). Dreamlands: Cotton Candy Hunt, along with the Galaxy Flyer, was one of the park's original attractions. Until removal, visitors could play Cotton Candy Hunt in the park's AstroCave, a children's section enclosed by a rocket ship ride. On May 15, 2011, Six Flags ended its relationship with Steiner Amusements, and Dreamlands: Cotton Candy Hunt was removed from the park two weeks later. History In 1979, Six Flags Over Texas opened Dreamland, a children's theme park and the park's first attraction was a roller coaster known as Astro-X. Astro-X was a patented design from an Ohio company named Specialty Car Park Attraction. In 1996, Hollywood Park in California renamed their six attractions into Dreamworlds. Before Dreamlands, most Six Flags parks, including Over Texas, in which Astro-X was built, had one theme roller coaster. The Galaxy Flyer, a missile ship ride located in this park, was given the task of transporting guests to an area called the AstroCave to play the Cotton Candy Hunt game. The AstroCave was one of the few locations in the park which could be found under the rocket ship ride. The Cotton Candy Hunt game was first opened up in 1985 when Six Flags Great America opened its Dreamworld, which featured themed comic book themed slides that were also known to be the ride's predecessor, Lightning Run. The attraction featured brightly colored pinwheels that launched guests from the AstroCave through a variety of different zones, and then launched guests to a free ride to the end of the ride. Riders had no control of the attraction. In 1992, Six Flags purchased Astro-X and added a new feature to Astro-X which involved spinning pinwheels which simulates the ride of a plane, train, and
