Madawaska River The Madawaska River is a tributary of the Saint John River in Southern New Brunswick, New Brunswick, Canada. History The early settlers of the Madawaska Valley were mainly French Canadians. Early French names for the river include Chareu, Charette, and Champlain. The name Madawaska was bestowed by the British to the river for the English-speaking multilingualism of the area, part of the areas where a variety of different language groups were present, including Acadians, Irish, Loyalists and British. Early Irish settled the Madawaska Valley, in particular along the East Saint John Valley, at the same time as the Innu people. These inhabitants spoke a language derived from Algonquin and called themselves Iroquois. The Chasse-Galette was an Iroquois settlement in the Madawaska Valley.
