To study clinical and laboratory parameters to evaluate the severity of paraquat poisoning. The clinical and laboratory data of 27 patients with paraquat poisoning were collected and analyzed in this study. A score system was developed to evaluate the severity of poisoning: The clinical score was based on the occurrence of paraquat-induced hemolytic anemia (0-6 points), jaundice (0-4 points), renal failure (0-6 points), pulmonary edema (0-3 points), hydrothorax (0-3 points), pneumonia (0-3 points) and multiple organ failure (MOF; 0-4 points). The laboratory score was based on the initial concentration of paraquat (0-4 points), alveolar-arterial oxygen gradient, blood urea nitrogen (BUN) (0-4 points), creatinine (0-4 points), total bilirubin (TBL) (0-8 points), alkaline phosphatase (ALP) (0-4 points), aspartate transaminase (AST) (0-4 points), albumin (ALB) (0-4 points), Na(+) (0-4 points), and K(+) (0-4 points). The chi2 test was used to analyze the difference in rates of each clinical and laboratory parameter among patients with different severity of poisoning. The total score of clinical parameters and the laboratory score were used to calculate the area under the curve (AUC) and to compare the value in assessing the severity of poisoning. A total of 27 patients were included in the study. The patients who did not received dialysis had higher rates of hemolytic anemia, 0cc13bf012
