After this we have to inform our client's to access the app through Testflight. How can I restrict our client's to who can see their own app information and when he is logged in. I mean Testflight is little bit similar to facebook application for posting etc. Thanks in advance. A: You can't hide information about the app, at least not in the way you are thinking about it. You can restrict access to logged-in users and log-outs. So if they are logged in and you know their iTunes or Google credentials you can give them access to the app. But anyone that knows the credentials will be able to access the app.

As far as I know you can't hide other users (i.e. users that are not logged in) and you can't hide the download history after the app is downloaded. I have made this: var setInterval = setInterval(function(){ $('#myElement').css({'transform':'rotate(0deg)', 'opacity':'1'}); }, 5000); And that is working fine. I need it to work 10 times. But I have no idea how to do that.. The number of times I need it to work is always different... How should I fix this? Also, this is the full code for the setInterval function: $(document).ready(function(){ var $el = $('#myElement'); $el.css({'transform':'rotate(0deg)', 'opacity':'1'}); var setInterval = setInterval(function(){ $el.css({'transform':'rotate(0deg)', 'opacity':'1'}); }, 1000); A: Use a setTimeout with the same value as the interval: setInterval(function(){ $('#myElement').css({'transform':'rotate(0deg)', 'opacity':'1'}); }, 5000); setTimeout(function(){ $('#myElement').css({'transform':'rotate(0deg)', 'opacity':'1'}); }, 5000); Or just create a closure from the function: (function() { $('#myElement').css({'transform':'rotate(0deg)', 'opacity':'1'}); })(); A: You could use setInterval, but since you are rotating, use the e79caf774b
