Q: What does more than just you! mean? I had seen this in manga and I am wondering what it means. It came from a fun story where a troll who thinks of anime/manga called his younger sister. However, the sister doesn't want to read anime, but troll says "Hey! I want to read more than just you!" So I tried googling around, but I don't seem to get the translation. I guess it means 'I'm interested in [than you]', but what does it mean? A: more than just you! = "I want to know more about (them) than about (you)." In this case, "them" is more than just you! and "you" is more than just you!. If you don't want to be compared to the anime/manga she is interested in, maybe you could simply say more than just you!? ("I don't want to know about that.") Re: get new job I read this post, and I have a question to add to it. I am having this same problem right now, and I have a list of candidates for an interview. The employers require me to call the candidates and tell them about the interview, and let them know if they are interested in getting the job. The problem is that the lists are quite long, and the number of candidates isn't very high. At the moment, I am writing the e-mail and waiting for the candidates to reply, it is taking time and more time. So my question is: can I pre-fill the form by asking the candidates if they are interested in the job? Re:

ALLAHABAD KIDS Last Saturday saw the teenagers from Al-Nozha School in Nottingham launch their new website, GoForTheKids.co.uk, the culmination of a campaign launched by the children to highlight the level of basic services provided within the Al-Nozha community. The children felt that by highlighting their plight, especially in regards to education, they could help the local community to understand the needs of the people living there. The site is a collective effort from the children, with advice and information about some of the issues they face, and links to relevant charities for those who wish to donate. Just as the children of Al-Nozha were celebrating the success of their campaign, a similar, albeit local group, struck the headlines when on April 14th they reported that one of their number had been murdered in his home. The murderer was a neighbourhood thug named Waheed, who it is reported had already been convicted for two other murders, and had been working in the area. The incident sparked a tense stand-off between local residents and police, and the community was gripped by fear as the events unfolded over the next few days. There was a council meeting on the evening of the 14th attended by local councillors and members of the community, which was called following the disturbance in the neighbourhood. During this meeting, the children of Al-Nozha stood, with the help of a police officer, and spoke to members of the council about the issues they face. As well as this, council officials reported that since the meeting, there had been no
