A: Puedes usar `tomarItems(8)()` para leer la segunda fila en una lista y con `split()` separar cada uno de los elementos de la lista. Aunque bastante complicado de expresar, si lo que deseas es ayudarte a leer solo las primeras 8 letras de cada elemento en la lista. Ejemplo

List filas = tomarItems(8)(List); String cadena = filas.get(0);
System.out.println("Cadena: " + cadena); for (String tos : filas) { System.out.println(tos); } Esto es muy simple de explicar porque no es necesario jugar con números ni parámetros, pero con java siempre es bueno tratar de entender el máximo lo más que puedas. Para tu caso concreto tendrías que hacer algo así List filas = (List) tomarItems(8)(cadena); List listado = new ArrayList(); for (String tos : filas) { String [] todasLetras = tos.split(" ");
listado.add(todasLetras[0]); } for (String tos : listado){
System.out.println(tos); } Explicación (List) tomarItems(8)(cadena) Seleccionamos 8 caracteres,

Three days ago, as ISIS was finalizing its plan to attack France, it sent a tweet to the ambivalent Obama: “Even if you didn’t come, your death will not be in vain.” Obama, who was in North Carolina, ordered the bombing of Syria. We should all die for the world. Yes, for our children and our grandchildren. But for ourselves? What about the beauty of life? What about the joy of a sunset over the Rio Grande? What about the sweetness of running through the trees at dawn? To die for the world is very unsatisfying. And so we live in a world where “the end of the world” means the shooting of a few hundred Syrian civilians. We are living in a world with the farcical pretension that Assad must go — even though the West has long ago determined that he is the Frankenstein Monster who must be killed — or that the terrorists must be allowed to win. We live in a world in which our leaders are stuck in Middle Ages, still trapped by the ancient doctrine that we must choose sides, and that warfare must be undertaken in such a way that it has the most possible benefit for our own side. Only when we let ourselves see that the world is not a zero-sum game, that we're not playing a game of chess with the world's greatest army against the best we've got, only then can we ask the far greater question of whether the choice is between war and love. And only when we can see that the real battle is one of heart and mind can we think seriously about peace and mutual aid. 8 thoughts on "diccionario de competencias martha alles pdf" inflamed; now, promoted the two rate per minute.
