More particularly, the present invention is directed to relief valves used to prevent catastrophic failure of an apparatus such as, for example, a hydraulic cylinder assembly, associated with a machine which automatically changes the position of a pressurized fluid or a hydraulic cylinder assembly, which may be either air or hydraulic type. In either case, it is necessary that a relief valve be provided in such a manner that it will remain operable under a variety of circumstances so that the working pressure of the fluid is not suddenly released. Conventionally, relief valves for a system which includes a power source and a plurality of hydraulic cylinder assemblies are designed for the normally anticipated point of failure and will remain operable in such failure. However, because of the costs involved in maintaining such systems, it is a goal in the industry to minimize the probability of failure so that unnecessary maintenance expenses are reduced. Moreover, because of the improved low cost of hydraulic cylinder assemblies, it is a further goal to prevent the catastrophic failure of those hydraulic cylinder assemblies which are relatively inexpensive to manufacture and maintain. Applicant is aware of the following United States Letters Patents pertaining to various aspects of the present invention. _____ Patent No. Inventor Date _____ 1,325,065 McAvery Oct. 11, 1919 2,407,033 Lambert Feb. 11, 1947 2,779,852 Moulton Jan. 29, 1957 3,057,469 Sciafani Nov. 25, 1962 3,094
