Choosing a file format After you've created a file to work on in Photoshop or Elements, you must choose a file format. Raster files are created in one of two raster formats — Photoshop Raster (PSD) or Tagged Image File (TIF). Tagged Image File is used in both Photoshop and Elements, whereas Photoshop uses PSD files. If you save a file as a PSD file, you can still open it in Photoshop. However, if you save the file in Tagged Image File, it can't be opened in Photoshop unless you convert it first. TIFF files are the native file format for both Photoshop and Elements. You can't import TIFF files into Photoshop or Elements unless you first convert them. This can be done by using the Photoshop TIFF Converter utility, or you can simply save your TIFF file as a PSD file. Figure 20-2 shows the Photoshop TIFF Converter utility. Figure 20-2: The Photoshop TIFF Converter is the most advanced and easiest tool to convert TIFF files to PSD.

Q: Change "On click" to "On Hover" for a hyperlink How can I set this up so that the text in the box will turn into a black box (like a field or label) when you hover over the text? I have it set up at the moment so that it does what I want when the hyperlink is clicked, but it does not appear to change back to normal text when the mouse leaves the text box. Here is the code: a.link { width: 100px; height: 25px; background: #F33; color: #FFF; text-align: center; line-height: 25px; text-decoration: none; position: relative; left: 2em; } a.link:after { content: ""; position: absolute; top: 0; left: 0; height: 100%; width: 100%; background: url(../image/arrow.png); background-repeat: no-repeat; background-position: 0 0; padding: 0 0px 0 50px; } a.link:hover::after { background-position: 0 50%; } Google A: Use :hover pseudo-class (as you already did). If it's going to work on all elements, you can use it on the selector a:hover: a.link { width: 100px; height: 25px; background: #F33; color: #FFF; text-align: center; line-height: 25px; text-decoration: none; position: relative;

Q: How to access elements of map and update them I have the map: var r = { 1 : { title: "One", type: "note" }, 2 : { title: "Two", type: "notepad" } }; I can access elements of it using r[1], but I want to update an element of this map using r[1].title = "new title". How to access that element? A: With variable name, you can fetch it using bracket notation: r[1].title = "new title"; Q: What is the difference between Wireshark and Ethereal? I'm trying to capture my network traffic but i'm not sure which one to use. I can't seem to find any information of differences on their website. Should I use Wireshark or Ethereal? A: They both are similar in purpose but Wireshark has much more advanced packet capabilities and several features that Ethereal does not have (e.g. the ability to selectively capture by IP (import/export/etc.), by host/service, by port, by protocol, by file,...) For example, when you capture with Wireshark you have a number of options to display (overlay, use or save the packet capture,...). When you capture with Ethereal you have just one option (save capture to file) so you will need to capture on Ethereal, open it and display the files (the location of the files are saved on the preferences). Besides the display options, the most important difference between Wireshark and Ethereal is the Ethereal has no GUI. To launch Ethereal, you need to run the executable. To use Wireshark you need to use the GUI which is very easy to use (once you configured it). A great advantage of Wireshark is the ability to export packets into a variety of formats (e.g. JSON, pcap, XML,...). Ethereal does have this, but it has more limitations and the formats are different than Wireshark's (for example, Ethereal's XML format has only specific tags). // Copyright 2014 The Chromium Authors.
