Light field photography has a wide range of applications. One of the uses for light field photography is for video for real-time video processing for virtual reality (VR). However, due to limited data rate of available displays, a light field video may need to be compressed by using various coding techniques. One issue that arises in light field video compression, is that data needed for rendering a light field video may be distributed over multiple frames. The distribution of data may cause compromises for data compression. It is desirable to optimize the data compression scheme used to encode light field video. People rescue snowmen made from thousands of snowballs after a blizzard dumped around 2.5 meters (8 feet) of snow on parts of Stockholm, Sweden, on Thursday. Arne Arvinder/Fria Tider via AP A car was abandoned on the roof of a building and two people were swept away by the strong currents. The storm dumped more than 2.5 meters of snow in the city's Rinkeby area on Thursday, with weather
