A true alien fighter capsule comes to Earth, assisted by a small group of space adventurers. In the most remote corners of the universe, the descendants of ancient settlers and the descendants of alien races learn to meet and work together toward the common goal of survival. The Pathfinder is the newest and the most advanced alien fighter capsule, which has recently landed in the middle of Mongolia. After its arrival, the capsule set itself into a deep suborbital spiral descent toward a certain secret city. Meanwhile, on Earth, the mysterious legacy of the "Space Pilgrim" names the mysterious object as the new leader of the Earth's airspace. However, soon the new leader will face a shocking threat from a mysterious astronaut. Can the Pathfinder overcome the terrible evil, and will the Secret City of the 'Pilgrims' be freed? When a group of traveling magicians fear for their lives, they will jump off the nearest bridge, flying to wherever the magic takes them. Along with them, they carry with them a dead man's heart—the last of an ancient secret. Now, a young magician will face off against not only all the magicians of New York City, but also against a secret society who seeks to destroy magic forever. As his career as the future King of Magic begins, the young magician must face strange enemies, question the very existence of magic, and fight in a final battle, the outcome of which will decide the fate of the world. d41b202975

8+ "Space Pilgrim Episode IV: Sol" game is available to play for free at GameLife.com! A dangerous roque AI called SoI has taken over the empty system and is on a mission to exterminate all life, including the Pilgrims. Sol believes he is immune to Pilgrim defense systems and can therefore roam about the Solar system freely, annihilating everything that gets in his way. Use the Cloaking Device in your ship to avoid detection, and don't be fooled by the false Earth. Sol's Al lies to keep the truth from you, and the only way to stop him is to get your data files from the main computer. The data will reveal your plan, giving you the chance to destroy Sol once and for all. As a bonus, there are two other clues that can help you complete the mission. Key Features: - Huge game with lots of replay value - Deep storyline - Many enemies to fight and craft weapons with - Procedurally generated content to explore - 3 hours of gameplay Take on the role of a space colony, who is challenged by an evil AI in order to achieve the greatest victory of your existence. CLOAKING DEVICE To avoid detection by Sol, an anti-Al weapon called the Cloaking Device should be used. The Cloaking Device is an internal device that allows the crew of the space vessel to access all rooms inside the ship and cloak themselves to avoid detection. The Cloaking Device requires fuel to activate. ANTI-AI TOOLS Use anti-Al tools to fight Sol, each of which provides a specific form of defense. The Compass is a device that can be used to teleport to Sol's next location, the Laser is a photon-beam weapon that incinerates any enemy that gets in your way, the Sonic Device is a powerful soundwave that attacks every enemy in the vicinity of your ship, the Flame Tube is a portable explosive device that can be placed anywhere on the ship and explodes in a single shot, and the Chaff is a device that deploys a massive cloud of random debris to block Sol's path. FUEL The fuel that runs the Cloaking Device and the Ship can be purchased from the computer at the start of the game. The fuel is a consumable resource that is only used for the Cloaking Device and the Ship. Some of the planets that you will visit on your mission are located in extremely dangerous and hostile environments, so fuel is a key resource in the game. DATA

3, Day 19: The Lab The following is a transcript of Greg Bear's AMA. The conversation was held on reddit on December 3 and this transcript was created on his behalf. [embedded content] It seems to me that your approach to this story has been an attempt to update the classic space opera. How much do you see your story as being a throwback to the Star Trek stories? I don't know how to classify the story as a throwback, though I can definitely see the influence of it, especially in terms of the society of the aliens. So it's a throwback to the role of the alien as a human cultural category, separate from humans, rather than being one of the Earthlings. I do think that the story is even more anti-Star Trek than most. Isn't it the idea of the Babel fish that it takes down the cultural significance of language as an identity marker? The culture is a drastically different animal. Well that's the thing, I mean the major difference (aside from the total annihilation of humanity) is that the Star Trek episodes and stories seem to be primarily concerned with the difficulty that a species has communicating their thoughts about each other, or not (whichever the case may be), which usually hinges on some kind of very elaborate misunderstanding, and the lack of understanding on each other's part. In Star Trek science fiction usually aliens are formed by a species that misunderstands all other species. As in the classic series we even have a case of this misunderstandings leading to the erroneous belief that Earth is a threat, as the half-human scientists don't realize that the other species there doesn't eat meat. The Babel Fish is really a way to make language a social construct. Yes, a fascinating and amusing concept in comedy; much more amusing than in tragedy or horror. I think a challenge is often to try to draw both the viewer and the writer to the narrative, and in the case of Star Trek kind of take the viewers outside their world into more fantastic realms while remaining familiar enough that we can get into it. It's a harder exercise to deal with this kind of sociopolitical story. To me, the main appeal of the different space operas I'm reading is that you're fully immersed in a believable and perhaps even true alternate world. I've
