He was a former monk of the monastic center of Tigris. Bishop Dionysius was born in or near the city of Amida (some 30 miles southwest of Mosul) and became a monk at the monastery of Tigris, which was a center of learning in the Archdiocese of Maymin, also known as Mesopotamia, in the mid-seventh century. He became the abbot of the monastery and reigned as such until 636 when he was sent to Persia by the archbishop of Seleucia Pieria, Saint Ephraim (also known as Epiphanius), as an envoy to the Zoroastrian, king Yazdegerd I. He became a Christian along with 20 of his brothers and led the Church of the East in Persia until 644. He then returned to his native lands where he became the first bishop of the See of Sele b7e8fdf5c8
