You then decide to wait for half an hour, past the time of your meeting, to see if there's any way to take the meeting in person.. Connect it to the screen or TV using the included HDMI cable.. Don't like the person you' re meeting with? Then work out a different time. Welcome to the GWTW Forum. Guests (non-registered users) can view the forum but are unable to post. If you don't have anything to say then why would you bother to register? One of the most popular sections of the GWTW Forum has long been the Swap Meet. A great place to sell old, seldom flown kites or to get great deals on used (gently flown) kites. Only registered users can see the Swap Meet section, let alone wheel and deal. 1000's (literally) of kites have changed hands thanks to the Swap Meet. There are several more benefits to being a registered user, but you'll have to join our little community to find out all the "secrets". Questions or concerns? Contact Steve... just drop an email to: forum.gwtwkites@gmail.com Questions about how to hang a kite from the inside of a window?We live in an old bungalow so there is no place to put outside kites.We would like to put up a kite, maybe small. I guess a 10m would be ok?We have some window treatments and I have not seen any pictures of a kite hanging inside. Does anyone know if this is at all possible and if so, what do we need? How do we attach it? Thanks for any help you can provide on this subject. Attachments jigdumper, that kind of window is called an Incy window, they are a little narrower than a standard window. I've hung a variety of kites from them, and have had some success with it. Some advice is to get a good amount of rope on the kite and make sure it is properly balanced. There are still some places that you don't really need to use rope, you can get
