SurferÂ .The overall objective of this research project is to develop a new method for the determination of human immunoglobulin allotypes at the IgG level. The approach taken is one of detailed genetic analysis of immunoglobulin allotypes and IgG phenotypes at the level of synthesis in individuals and families. The principal, but not exclusive, approach is based on the use of panels of monoclonal IgG antibodies which bind specifically to the IgG allotypes, the monoclonal antibodies being used as probes for the detection of IgG allotypes by means of the enzyme-linked immunosorbent assay (ELISA). Since approximately 85% of the haplotypic variability at the Fc receptor locus has been mapped to the D and J gene regions, which are encoded on the heavy chain of the immunoglobulin molecule, this region of the gene is the focus of the genetic analysis. In order to maximize the efficiency and facilitate the analysis of the variations in the D and J loci, the selection of monoclonal antibodies to be used in the development of this assay will be based on their high binding affinity for Fc receptors. The production of monoclonal antibodies with this property has been perfected for the D allotypes. In fact, the majority of these monoclonal antibodies are specific for only one allotype. The complete series of Fc binding allotypes will be tested for the binding specificities of these monoclonal antibodies. The enzymes to be used in this project are Beta-galactosidase and Beta-glycosidase.
