Yes, Mark Ingram didn't have the best game vs. the Cleveland Browns, but he still put up almost 100 yards rushing. And, more impressively, he showed the mental ability to make some big gains. "Ingram has come a long way," Saints coach Sean Payton said in his press conference. "Maybe the best compliment is, he'll tell you himself, that one of the worst games of his season was his rookie year. It speaks to his work ethic and his preparation. And the physical part of it." Ingram averaged 4.1 yards per carry, but his longest run was 29 yards. Most of his production came in the fourth quarter. When he had more than one carrying block in the backfield, he put up just 2.3 yards per carry. Without significant production from the running back, the Saints averaged 3.3 yards per carry. Ingram was tackled for no gain on the second play, but he broke a pair of tackles early on in the game. Then, after a holding penalty on Corey White that gave the Browns free yards, c6a93da74d
